Inside: Council Christmas arrangements
NHS good health guide

Welcome

Welcome to the December issue of the council's magazine.

In this issue we bring you information on two significant developments of recent weeks which affect many of us on the Island. Firstly, the decision of the council's cabinet – following extensive consultation - to approve a new two-tier education system for the Island, and secondly the news that our adult services have been accredited as among the best in the country.

Further updates on developments with our education reforms will be given in future editions.

With the festive season almost upon us, we also in this edition include important information on opening times for council services over Christmas and the New Year, and for those of our partners at the Isle of Wight NHS Primary Care Trust.

The magazine also provides helpful guidance on issues such as food hygiene over Christmas and the One Journey initiative to keeping healthy via the council's Tone Zone gyms.

On behalf of councillors and staff. I would like to offer our very best wishes to you all for Christmas and the New Year, and for the year ahead.

Councillor David Pugh, Leader of the Isle of Wight Council

A new two-tier education system for the Island has been approved by the council's cabinet following extensive consultations.

The proposals were those the council formally consulted upon from 23 June to 10 October 2008, with some amendments.

Full details of the amendments can be found at www.iwight. com/council/meetings and by following the links to the cabinet papers.

The main reforms agreed, were:

- to establish a new primary (four to 11 age range) and secondary (11 to 19 age range) school system – the primary sector will have no schools below a one form entry (a maximum of 30 new pupils in a year group) and no schools larger than a two form entry (a maximum of 60 new pupils in a year group);
- all community secondary schools will be established as new schools and be let under government competition rules – the council will not bid to run these schools as this will allow the authority to adjudicate the submissions;

- to approve the recommendations in respect of individual schools, as detailed in the revised list (see cabinet papers at www.iwight.com/council/meetings);
- that council officers should prepare a full business case analysis for the provision of an appropriate school transport system;
- in areas where there has been significant response to, or concern about the proposals, an independent education panel should be established to review the proposals and submit a report in February 2009 (this relates to two areas – Shalfeet Primary and Yarmouth Primary as one area, and St Helens Primary, Nettlestone Primary and Brading Primary as the other area)

For more information on the education system reforms please visit the council's iwight.com website.

Adult social care services provided by the Isle of Wight Council have been awarded a three-out-of-three star rating.

The council is one of 56 councils out of 150 to have been awarded the top mark by the Commission for Social Care inspection (CSCI) - the government body which regulates, inspects and reviews all adult social care services in England.

The service has been rated 'excellent' for leadership and use of resources and has also been judged to have 'excellent' prospects for further improvement.

Previously the Island had been rated at two out of three stars with only 'promising' prospects for improvement.

Councillor Dawn Cousins, cabinet member for health and wellbeing, said: "I am delighted with this judgement for adult social care and the Island. I know we will continue to seek bold solutions to providing first-class personalised social care for our residents."

Among key strengths identified by CSCI following its recent inspection were the council's innovative free homecare scheme for the over 80s; the development of the information prescription service that enables individuals to access information that meets their individual needs; and improved access to direct payments.

The review also highlighted the availablility of timely access to assessments, as well as ensuring older people did not remain in hospital longer than clinically necessary.

The inspection also found a number of strengths in mental health provision, including the assistance given to residents in gaining and maintaining employment or voluntary work.

A number of key areas for development were also identified and will be addressed.

Sarah Mitchell, the council's director of community services, said: "While it is the council that has been given the rating, it is important to remember that this rating reflects the care that is being received by our residents. I am delighted that those people are receiving a three-out-of three star service."

Early success for truancy scheme

Positive early results have been achieved following the extension of the Island's Truancy Watch scheme to Sandown.

A special truancy sweep in the town at the start of this month found only one young person out of school without a valid reason.

Truancv sweeps are among a range of initiatives the council and its partners, including Hampshire Constabulary and local businesses, organise to reduce the number of young people skipping school.

The council's education welfare officers also work closely with schools and families to offer support and advice.

The Truancy Watch scheme involves businesses refusing to serve children of school age during term between 9am and 3pm each school day unless accompanied by an adult and with a good reason or a valid absence slip from their school. The scheme is also currently running in Shanklin, Newport and Ryde.

An Island man awarded an MBE in this year's Queen's Birthday Honours received the honour from Lord-Lieutenant Major General Martin White at a special ceremony at Newchurch recently.

More than 50 friends and guests joined him at Newchurch Pavilion, a community building in existence thanks in part to his fund raising efforts.

Mr Smith is a key figure in the Newchurch community and over the last 25 years has set up numerous organisations including the Newchurch Parish Sports and Community Association, which has raised funds for many projects. The association was behind the Island's garlic festival, which has helped raise funds to buy a pavilion, create playing fields and part fund the cost of Newchurch Community Hall.

Mr Smith is also chairman of the Apse Heath Over 60s' Club, life president of the Newchurch Horticultural Society and coordinator of the Alverstone Poetry Club. A keen astronomer, he was secretary of the Vectis Astronomical Society for 20 years, and instrumental in the creation of the Isle of Wight Observatory at Newchurch.

Mr Smith said: "I was delighted so many representatives of our community could be present at the ceremony, recognizing the valued support they have given me and various projects over many years."

Stay safe over Christmas

Various agencies on the Island have been working together to help ensure the festive season this year is as safe as possible.

A range of schemes to better inform the public have been central to the initiative.

The focus has been on information about issues including drink driving, binge drinking, personal safety, domestic abuse and sexual health.

The council, Hampshire Constabulary and NHS Isle of Wight are among the agencies working together, under the umbrella of the Crime and Disorder Reduction Partnership and Drug Action Team.

One of the most visible campaigns is combating drink driving, with this year's theme about enforcement. The message is 'Over the Limit, Under Arrest' and 'If you are caught driving under the influence of drink or drugs, you will be prosecuted'. Strong images are being displayed on billboards around the Island.

Alcohol related crime and admissions to accident and emergency are also being highlighted through a 'Know your Limits' message from the Drug Action Team and the NHS. Alcohol awareness packs and advice for people on a night out are being piloted. There is also a website at www.iwight.com/ knowyourlimits

Community plantings will bring colour to cemetery

Binstead Cemetery is set to be brightened up next spring thanks to a community daffodil-planting initiative involving Binstead Primary School and the local community.

Binstead Community Partnership organised the project, with pupils from the school planting bulbs earlier this month.

Two of the council's environment and neighbourhoods officers also took part in the planting, as part of their aim to build links with young people in the community and encourage good citizenship.

Binstead Primary School pupils have also planted bulbs in Binstead Rest Garden, erected bat boxes, and planted trees in their area.

Helen Flynn, head teacher, said: "The children learn a great deal from taking part in community activities like this. They gain a greater understanding of what it means to be a responsible citizen and learn to respect the environment in which they live, important skills which enhance their learning in the classroom."

The Binstead Community Partnership is made up of members of the local community, church groups, the local primary school, parish councillors and interested individuals living in Binstead.

Scheme helps revive traditional skills

Students from the Isle of Wight College at Newport have been developing their traditional craft skills with the help of the council and Heritage Lottery Fund-supported Ryde Townscape Heritage Scheme.

Ten students have attended a brickwork master class run by the Learning and Skills Council and Bursledon Brickworks near Southampton as part of the heritage scheme's emphasis on traditional skills.

The training courses offered through the scheme are designed to help remedy the shortage of skilled labour in the traditional crafts sector on the Island.

The Heritage Lottery-funded initiative specifically aims to regenerate Ryde through works of repair and enhancement to its historic buildings and areas.

The scheme places an emphasis on training Island contractors to be able to carry out the work, and so far has run 12 sessions, benefiting builders, surveyors, architects, and students and tutors from the construction department of the Isle of Wight College.

 For more information about the training sessions, you can email: thitraining@iow.gov.uk.

New climate change website for home owners

English Heritage has developed a new website for home owners, called Climate Change and Your Home - to help understanding about climate change effects on houses of traditional construction (those built before the Second World

It contains advice on how to improve the energy efficiency of traditionally constructed houses, and the use and installation of micro-renewable technologies.

A key feature of the website is the way information can be tailored to the user's chosen house period and location, with advice on how improvements to energy efficiency might be made.

The new site can be found at www.climatechangeandyourhome.org.uk

Conservation area reviews at Ryde and Freshwater Bay

The council's conservation team is working on re-designating, expanding and refining the conservation areas at Ryde and Freshwater Bay.

The review is part of a programme of updating 29 existing conservation areas across the Island and designating more than 20 new areas.

Conservation area designation does not mean development cannot take place, but that special consideration is needed for planning applications in the area. This is to ensure any demolition is justified and schemes are of a suitable design and high standard.

Conservation area considerations include the topography, street layout, boundaries, historical development, archaeological potential and landscape factors.

Councils have a duty under The Planning (Listed Buildings & Conservation Areas) Act 1990 to designate as conservation areas any areas considered to be of special architectural or historic interest.

Take the One Journey route to feeling good

Island residents who are keen to improve their health and personal fitness are being encouraged to enrol in the One Journey initiative.

One Journey was introduced at the council's Tone Zone gyms at the beginning of August, and is already helping to boost the feel-good factor for many people.

One Journey focuses on a personal training approach and one-to-one advice, helping to decrease waistlines and improve muscle tone and cardio fitness.

The journey starts when a Tone Zone personal instructor meets with the customer and reviews what they want to achieve and agrees short and long-term fitness goals. A personal programme is developed with key exercises and activities.

If you're interested in enrolling on One Journey, call or visit your local leisure centre and book a tour to see what's on offer. Staff will discuss your requirements and advise you of the membership and payment options best suited to you.

A number of schemes to make travel on Island roads safer and more comfortable are being undertaken by the council.

These include steps to make it safer for children and parents to travel to and from school, improvements to traffic signals and more major schemes to improve the highway network.

The next round of major works under the council's ongoing highway improvement programme will see the surfaces upgraded on Brading Road and Bullen Road at Ryde; Cedar Hill, Carisbrooke; Colwell Road/Hill Lane, Freshwater; Rolls Hill, between Thorness Lane and Rew Street; Godshill Road, between Cliff Bridge and Apse Manor Road; Clarence Road between West Street and the urban limit at Ventnor; and Freshwater Road from Chessell Cross to Calbourne Mill.

Work is also being done as part of the council's Safe Routes To School programme:

- At Arreton, safe and fully disabled compliant facilities will be created for pedestrians travelling between the community centre and Arreton primary school, and also the local pub and the community car park.
- At Haylands, there will be work to make school journeys safer in three locations Upton Road, junction of Bettesworth Road which will include a new crossing and road crossing patrol officer; at Swanmore Road junction with Osborne Road/Ratcliff Avenue, where the scheme includes a new zebra crossing; and at the Pellhurst Road junction of Partlands Avenue/Playstreet Lane.

Other recently completed works include at Wootton, with the relocation of the Newport bound bus stop and the installation of a new zebra crossing, and at Sylvan Drive, Newport where there have been works to improve pedestrian safety and reduce vehicle speeds with disabled compliant crossing points, traffic islands and speed reactive signs.

Consultations are underway on a new planning blueprint to help shape the way the Island is developed until 2026.

The document is called the Island Plan Core Strategy and sets out the Island's broad planning policies governing the locations, nature and timescale of development. It is the first part of the emerging overall Island Plan that will replace the existing Unitary Development Plan.

The core strategy covers issues including employment sites, housing, and the rates at which new homes should be built and renewable energy.

The council's cabinet gave the nod for an eight-week consultation period to begin on the strategy earlier this month, inviting submissions on any major objections to the soundness of the proposals.

The next stage will be the appointment by the government of an independent examiner to scrutinise the document, at a public hearing – possibly lasting two weeks – in the early summer.

The examiner's final findings will be published in the winter of 2009 and – subject to any factual modifications – will be binding on the council. But the strategy will be kept under review annually to ensure it remains realistic and flexible.

Councillor George Brown, cabinet member for planning, said: "The plan will provide the essential framework for making decisions on proposed development and change of use. It has been drafted after a healthy amount of public representation and comment and strikes a crucial balance between the need for regeneration while protecting what is unique and good in the Island's landscape as its starting point."

• Copies of the Island Plan Core Strategy are available at all public libraries, the planning unit at Seaclose and Newport Help Centre at County Hall. It is also available on line at iwight.com

A range of activities and improvements were staged as part of a recent multi-agency Crime Reduction Environment Week to brighten up and reduce the fear of crime in Sandown.

Litter picking, dog chipping and graffiti removal were among the events and activities which took place at the start of December.

Various organisations and services were involved, including the council's community safety services, environment and neighbourhoods officers and the local police safer neighbourhoods team.

The probation service helped clean up Foxes Bridge, removing litter and cutting back overgrown branches and painting goalposts in nearby playing fields. And a team of young people from the Wessex Restorative Justice Service removed graffiti from fencing in Los Altos Park and replaced it with a street art design spelling the name of the park.

The council's dog wardens were on hand in Sandown High Street to offer dog owners the chance to have their pets chipped at a reduced rate of just £5, and students at Sandown High School were given talks on road safety, the dangers of drugs and fake guns.

Litter sweeps were carried out around the town by groups including the Sandown Observers, and the probation service helped clear up Sandham Gardens, Jeals Lane and Station Approach.

A key event bringing the week to a close was a five-a-side football tournament and live music night at Sandham Gardens.

Rural Community Council rural focus

It's official: the Isle of Wight is rural!

A recent piece of government research, which required a 30 page document to explain the methodology and a 49 page document to explain the results, has identified that the Isle of Wight is 'predominantly rural'.

No real surprises there – however, how we are viewed by the government is important, as it can influence how much funding we can access to support rural communities and the rural economy.

As I'm sure you'd agree, the Island's countryside is fantastic, adds much to our quality of life and the economy, and we owe a debt of gratitude to all those people who help maintain it.

However, rural areas are not without their problems, and issues of stimulating the rural economy, addressing shortages of affordable rural housing, ensuring the availability and accessibility of services for residents and the related transport barriers, are all presenting local challenges.

Through this regular 'Rural Focus' slot in One Island magazine we hope to raise the profile of certain rural issues and focus on the work that's being done to address them.

I hope you find it interesting.

Mike Bulpitt, chief executive, Isle of Wight Rural Community Council

Two familiar faces in rural communities on the Island have recently taken up the challenge of acting as rural champions. They are David Langford (right), the regional director of the Country Land and Business Association, and John Brownscombe (left), former lead officer of the Isle of Wight Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty Partnership.

They will be leading the work of the Rural Community Council in championing rural community needs and will help point you in the right direction and give support in finding solutions to rural issues.

• The rural champions can be contacted via the Rural Community Council reception, tel: 524058 or by email: rural@iwrcc.org.uk

Affordable housing success stories

A key issue facing rural communities on the Island is the lack of affordable housing for local people.

The credit crunch, a shortage of available mortgages, and the continuation of high house prices in rural areas, means many people are struggling to find a home in the area they were brought up in.

On the Island there have been two recent success stories to help counter this.

Ten energy efficient family homes have been built at Nettlestone, and allocated to local families, who between them have local connections to the parish of more than 145 years.

A similar scheme, St Mary's Court (pictured) has also been completed in Brading, where the local connection of new tenants is more than 84 years.

One tenant at St Mary's Court said: "I have been on the housing register for about seven years and didn't think I would ever get a house like this in Brading. It's so quiet and peaceful, with so much space."

These schemes have made a real difference to local families, and the rural housing enabler, Sharon Packer, based at the Rural Community Council, is working with parish councils to achieve even more schemes.

Brook's Seely Hall revived by community effort

Seely Hall at Brook has seen its use increase to 150-plus bookings in 2008, just a few years after its future was in peril.

In 2006 the community facility was in decline, with only seven bookings a year and an urgent need for repairs and updating.

Now thanks to a lot of hard work and fund raising the future is far brighter.

Belinda Walters, chairman of the Seely Hall management committee, said the turnaround had been achieved through organising events and activities which have breathed new life into the hall.

"We asked people if they wanted to keep the hall, but there also had to be a purpose to keeping it – meaning more use."

As well as increased use, further funding was needed for repairs and improvements.

The Brook Fete has been a particular success, and other events have helped to raise extra money for the hall's upkeep, as well as grant funding from Awards for All, the Isle of Wight Charitable Trust, the Isle of Wight Council, Brighstone Parish Council, timber firm Morey's, and various donations.

Local people meanwhile have helped with surveying, painting and decorating, general repairs and gardening.

Belinda said: "There are three key challenges: funding – even small amounts of money are significant to us; insurance – the increasing cost of the public liability cover in particular; and changes to regulations – ensuring we comply with new rules and regulations can be time consuming and daunting."

Volunteers help improve the Island's rural landscape

If you would like to help maintain or improve the rural landscape of the Island then the Isle of Wight Volunteer Centre can offer various opportunities:

• Green Gym

The Isle of Wight Green Gym (pictured at work above) meets every Wednesday (10am to 1pm) at various venues across the Island. You can help with activities like cutting back invasive undergrowth, planting trees or wildflowers, repairing steps on a public path, clearing out an overgrown pond, or even learn how to make benches and bat boxes.

• Hampshire and Isle of Wight Wildlife Trust

Join the trust and take part in one of its conservation days, helping with practical tasks that may include scrub clearance, ragwort pulling, coppicing, fencing and hurdle making.

Beachwatch

The Beachwatch initiative is part of the Adopt-a-Beach scheme, which encourages volunteers to survey and clean up beach litter four times a year. There are local opportunities to help clean up Freshwater Bay and Totland beaches. For more information on any of these opportunities contact Helen, tel: 539377, email: volunteer@iwrcc.org.uk

The West Wight Landscape Partnership Scheme is a programme of 17 projects aimed at conserving and enhancing the historic landscape and giving people the chance to get involved in the heritage of the West Wight.

The scheme, which began in November and lasts for three years, has funding of £2.5 million – including almost £2 million from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Among the 17 projects is the Landscape Enhancement Grant Scheme, offering financial help for initiatives which protect and enhance the landscape while showing public benefits.

More information on the various projects can be found at www.westwight.org

Scheme manager, Peter Fellows, can be contacted by email at peter.fellows@iow.gov.uk

Funding boost for the Island's rural economy

An extra £2.6 million of European Union grant funding has been secured to help the Island's rural economy over the next five years.

The funding will be managed by the Isle of Wight Economic Partnership via the Leader programme, and has four main aims: to help increase the economic value of land management and farming; to help the wider rural economy; to help projects promoting rural heritage; and to help schemes that benefit rural communities.

To find out more about the programme, you should contact Carol Flux at the economic partnership, tel: 535836.

Husband and wife team Vernon Tyreman and Jenny Kerry have played a key role in the rural community at Chale Green by purchasing and turning the village store into a real success.

In 2004 the store was facing an uncertain future and possible closure, but today it has managed to find a formula that really works for the local community, marrying traditional and new services.

Vernon and Jenny, members of the Chale Village Partnership, took the business over in January 2005, giving it a general facelift with new layout, lighting and shop fittings. But it soon became clear that a larger store was needed with more storage space, so plans for an extension were started, and two months ago the project was completed, with High Sheriff Alan Titchmarsh opening the new store.

As well as the features you would expect in a village shop and post office, the new Chale Green Stores (pictured) now has a large delicatessen and café with courtyard seating.

The improvements have been designed in an environmentally friendly way, with heating provided by a ground source system, rain water harvested for watering the gardens and flushing the toilets, light tubes bringing natural light into the shop and double insulation to keep the new building at a comfortable temperature all year round.

Be prepared

It is difficult to prevent you or your family from catching colds and flu, but a balanced diet and regular activity will help boost your immune system and your resistance.

No-one wants to think about becoming ill at a holiday time, but if you make sure that your home medicine chest contains a few simple remedies, you will be able to cope with most minor ailments and incidents. All of the basic items can be purchased from your local pharmacist – take this checklist with you next time you go shopping.

Pain relief for headaches, sore throats and other aches and pains:

- paracetamol, soluble aspirin or ibuprofen
- children's paracetamol and/or children's ibuprofen syrup

Easing the symptoms of coughs and colds:

- decongestant for adding to hot water, eg menthol and decongestant medicines
- decongestant for children

For upset tummies and over-indulgence:

- mild laxative
- indigestion remedy, eg antacid
- anti-diarrhoeal solution

Other basic first aid items:

- antiseptic solution
- thermometer
- selection of plasters in assorted sizes
- sterile dressings and triangular bandage
- two sterile eye pads
- cotton wool, safety pins, tweezers, sharp scissors and disposable gloves

It is important that you keep the medicine chest in a secure place that cannot be reached by small children.

IF YOU OR A MEMBER OF YOUR FAMILY HAVE REGULAR PRESCRIPTIONS, MAKE SURE YOU HAVE AN ADEQUATE SUPPLY OF THE MEDICATION TO LAST INTO THE NEW YEAR.

Pharmacist

The winter months can bring a host of minor ailments. With many modern medicines available over the counter, a visit to your local pharmacy can provide the expert advice and remedy that you're looking for.

m PROPERLY\ COOKED\ poultry\ and\ poultry\ products,\ including\ eggs,\ are\ safe\ to\ eat\ -\ but\ the\ spectre\ of\ food\ poisoning,\ particularly\ concerning\ the\ Christmas\ bird,\ is\ often\ lurking\ during\ the\ festive\ season.}$

To help ensure your poultry is prepared and cooked safely, the council's environmental health team has provided some useful tips.

Thawing

- Frozen poultry must be completely thawed before cooking (details of thawing times depending on weight can be found at www.iwight.com/eh).
- Place the bird in its bag on a plate in a cool place, such as a larder (preferably below 12°C). Never thaw in a warm place, this will allow bacteria to multiply.
- Test to see there are no ice crystals left in the cavity and that the legs and thighs are soft and move easily.
- Cook straight away, or refrigerate in the bottom part of the fridge, where it will not drip contaminated blood over any other food.

Cooking

- Remove the giblets, wash the bird thoroughly inside, and dry with clean kitchen paper.
- Do not stuff until just before putting the bird into the oven. Only stuff the neck end, not the body cavity. Cook any extra stuffing separately.
- As a rough guide the bird should be roasted at 190°C/375°F/Gas 5, for a duration determined by its weight and whether it is in foil or not (details of weights and cooking times can be found at www.iwight.com/eh).
- Individual ovens may vary, so always check the bird is thoroughly cooked. Test it with a skewer by piercing the deepest part of each thigh. The juices should run absolutely clear, not pink. If they run pink, return the bird to the oven and cook further, checking every 15 minutes.

Serving

• After carving, cool any remaining meat as quickly as possible (preferably within 90 minutes) and store in a fridge (between 0°C and 4°C).

Use of leftovers

 Once cooked, the meat is perfectly safe to freeze for up to two months (depending upon your freezer), even if it was a frozen bird in the first place.

ISLAND RESIDENTS are being advised by trading standards to think twice before entering into credit agreements in the run up to Christmas.

Many high street shops offer store cards, with a new version being called the 'Easy Shop Card'. This allows the shopper to borrow from £100 to £500 to spend in a particular store with repayments being regular and fixed and collected by a local agent.

Other schemes include 'Pay Day Loans' which give a loan that is then usually paid back over a short period (for example 30 days) with a flat rate of interest repayable by direct debit.

Another is called a 'Log Book Loan' – this is a loan against your car where you sign a credit agreement and a Bill of Sale. This essentially means the ownership of your vehicle transfers to the loan company and gives it the right to take possession of the vehicle. Repayments are made weekly or monthly.

The council's senior trading standards officer, Julie Woodhouse, said: "These are all forms of borrowing which can carry high interest rates. With the current financial climate and with Christmas looming, it can be tempting to use one of these forms of credit and worry about the repayments later.

"We want to advise residents to think very carefully before using one of these methods. A typical example of repayments on a current scheme can see you paying back £513 when you are loaned £300."

Trading standards has issued the following guidance for consideration before entering into any loan agreement:

- How much will the credit cost you compared with other similar deals?
- Is your home being used as security?
- Is it the best deal and interest rate you can get?
- Do you fully understand the credit agreement form you're about to sign?
- Will the interest rate stay the same?
- Are there extra charges if you repay the debt early?
- What happens if you miss a payment?
- What do you have to pay each month and for how long?
- What's the total amount that you will pay back?
- Can you take the credit agreement away to consider at your leisure?
- MOST IMPORTANT CAN YOU AFFORD THE REPAYMENTS?

The council's trading standards section can offer further advice, tel: 821000.

coast and country Wight winter

ature notes

Daybreak on a fine clear winter's morning – as the sun creeps above the horizon, distant fields and woods are shades of grey against the pale golden glow in the sky, and robins and wrens can be heard spending the winter leafless or even underground to avoid damage by frosts, but some stay green throughout the year. Hart's tongue fern (pictured above) can be seen in damp shady places like the woodland floor, or the base of walls. It has bright green, shiny, strap-like fronds with pointed tips. The undersides have brown ridges that produce a fine powdery dust made up of spores, the means by which the plant

Birds which have been out in the wider countryside are returning to gardens to look for food. Starlings often visit in noisy groups, swooping down on bird tables and scattering food as they peck rapidly. They are easily startled and rush off as quickly as they arrived. They are slightly smaller than blackbirds and appear speckled brown - until the low sun lights them up and shows metallic shades of pink and green in their glossy feathers.

Winter's short days often have memorable sunsets - shades of lavender, rose and apricot streaked through a deepening blue. Look out for starling flocks silhouetted against this backdrop. Birds swirl and stream across the sky, each aware of those around it, as the flock moves as one to its roost when night falls.
